AI Overview

Control room cable tray prices vary widely depending on type, material, and size, typically ranging from $20 to $200 per tray for standard industrial and commercial options. Price Ranges by Type and Material

Wire Mesh Cable Trays: Flexible and easy to install, prices generally range from $20 to $80 per tray depending on size and steel grade (GI, pre-galvanized, or stainless steel).

Ladder Cable Trays: Heavy-duty trays suitable for large cable bundles, typically priced between $50 and $200 per tray, with variations for aluminum, galvanized, or stainless steel.

Basket Cable Trays: Wire basket trays for organized routing in offices or data centers, usually $30 to $100 per tray, often UL-listed for safety compliance.

Single Rail Cable Trays: Compact solutions for light-duty applications, generally $25 to $70 per tray.

PVC Cable Trays: Fire-resistant and weatherproof, priced around $30 to $90 per tray, suitable for harsh environments.

Factors Affecting Price

Material: Stainless steel (304 or 316) is more expensive than electro-galvanized or hot-dip galvanized steel due to corrosion resistance and durability.

Size and Load Capacity: Larger trays or those designed for heavy-duty industrial use cost more.

Customization: Custom lengths, perforations, or coatings increase cost.

Supplier and Certification: UL-listed or NEMA-certified trays for control rooms may carry a premium.

Control Room-Specific Considerations

For high-security control rooms handling NIPR, SIPR, or SCADA networks, cable trays are often integrated into furniture systems to segregate cabling, maintain airflow, and simplify maintenance. These specialized trays may cost more due to design integration and compliance requirements.

Purchasing Options

B2B Suppliers: Platforms like Alibaba or Accio offer bulk industrial trays with customizable options.

Specialized Vendors: Control Room Depot and Kable Kontrol provide high-quality, durable trays with accessories for professional installations.

Retail/Small Projects: RS Online offers a range of trays suitable for smaller installations or office setups with fast delivery. In...
