

Price list for power distribution cabinets and boxes

AI Overview

The price of power distribution cabinets and boxes varies widely, from around $50 for basic residential units to several thousand dollars for industrial or smart cabinets, depending on size, materials, features, and customization.

Residential and Small-Scale Units Basic residential distribution boxes or consumer units typically cost $50 to $500, depending on whether they are single-phase or three-phase, the number of circuits, and the material of the enclosure (plastic, steel, or stainless steel). These units often include standard circuit breakers and are suitable for homes or small offices. Weather-resistant or outdoor-rated boxes may carry a premium.

Commercial and Industrial Cabinets Commercial and industrial power distribution cabinets are more complex and can range from $1,000 to $10,000 or more. Prices depend on factors such as rated current, number of outgoing circuits, breaker brand, monitoring systems, IP rating, ventilation, and customization requirements. Advanced features like touchscreen interfaces, remote communication modules, redundant A/B power architecture, and smart metering significantly increase costs.

Material and Construction Impact The enclosure material greatly affects pricing. ABS plastic is the most affordable, powder-coated steel is mid-range, and high-grade stainless steel is the most expensive, often used in corrosive or outdoor environments. Larger cabinets with more internal space for wiring and future expansion also cost more.

Additional Cost Considerations

- Installation and maintenance: Professional installation is required for safety and code compliance, adding to the total cost.
- Customization: Special mounting configurations, labeling, or integration with building management systems can increase the price.
- Long-term value: High-quality cabinets can last 25–40 years, though internal breakers may need replacement every 10–15...
